TWELVE THOUSAND PERSONS LOOK ON WHILE ISABELLE IS CROWNED QUEEN

I, YOUR loyal subject and mayor of your capital, do hereby present your Gracious Majesty with the key to the fair city of Reno, attesting thus our willingness to serve your royal pleasure.

This, benign sovereign, is the key to joy and merriment and gay festivity. Let none consort with care. Let us throw to the four winds of heaven all thought save that of pleasure. And then will your reign live ever in our hearts a bright and cherished memory.—Mayor D. W. O'Connor, presenting key to Reno to Queen Isabelle I at the throne.

CONTRACT IS LET FOR WORK AT TAHOE

Government Will Immediately Commence Work on Outlet at Lake. Plan Will Not Despoil Natural Beauties of Lake

WASHINGTON, June 29—Six bids were received by the reclamation service for the construction of an outlet, regulating works and bridge at the outlet of Lake Tahoe in connection with the Truckee and Carson Valley irrigation project, and the secretary of the interior has awarded the contract to Edward Malley of San Francisco, whose bid of $32,200 was the lowest.

Some misapprehension seems to exist in the minds of certain riparian owners as to the effect of these works on their property. The work as outlined is designed to utilize the lake between high and low water levels, as they have been known to exist for many years, and the plans involve a regulation of the lake within a limit of six feet, which is within a range of seven feet five inches, the natural fluctuation as shown by actual measurements.

The natural beauties of the lake will not be interfered with and it is not the purpose or intention of engineers to interfere with private rights along the lake shores.

In turn placed the golden scepter of authority upon the lap of the sovereign, with one accord the vast throng sent up a cheer that reverberated through the air and echoed back:

"The carnival is on!"

Promptly at 8 o'clock the Knights of Khorassan, 200 strong, some mounted, others following in line with torches started the parade that finally led to the throne.

Fred L. White was grand marshal and to his careful planning in no small measure is due the fact that there was not a single hitch in the line of march; every detail was carried out as originally outlined. The queen, with her four pages, was met at the home of Mrs. R. W. Parry. They rode in a white draped carriage drawn by four pure white horses. From the throne the sovereign to be, was greeted with cheers. Mayor O'Connor, in turning the key of the city over to the new ruler, said:

"I, your loyal subject and mayor of your capital, do hereby present your gracious majesty with the key to the fair city of Reno, attesting thus our willingness to serve your royal pleasure.

"This, benign sovereign, is the key to joy and merriment and gay festivity. Let none consort with care! Let us throw to the four winds of heaven all thought save that of pleasure. And then will your reign live ever in our hearts a bright and cherished memory."

HERALD'S PROCLAMATION

The crown was placed by Miss Agnes Delanchant.

The ceremonies opened with the reading of Herald Kirby's proclamation:

"Hear ye, hear ye, hear ye! To the north, to the south, to the east and to the west, from all over fair Nevada's land, from the smiling plains to the rolling river's richness, from the Truckee's fertile banks with its wealth and bloom of fruit and ripening grain, from the stretch of desert land, with its wondrous stores of gold hidden within its arid bosom, from over all Nevada's promised land, the loyal subjects come to crown the royal Isabelle queen and sovereign of our carnival. It is time for joy and great festivity. Glad subjects and royal ruler, lend in making this coronation one of royal magnificence and splendor.

"Behold the royal ruler comes! Comes to take possession of her rightful throne, comes to wield her scepter over the hearts of her faithful subjects. Long live the queen, our gracious ruler."

Miss Lydia Mainhart, a talented young lady from Grass Valley, sang

NEWSBOY RIOTS KEEP POLICE BUSY

Boycott on San Francisco Bulletin Assumes Such Proportions That Police are Called Upon to Quell the Insurrection.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 29—Nine arrests were made here this afternoon and evening as a result of rioting attending the boycott on the Bulletin. Several newsboys and older persons were slightly injured during a scrimmage on the street.

In answer to a riot call the chief of police sent a squad of officers to quell the disturbance near the Bulletin office.

It required several policemen to arrest a negro newsboy who was leading the attack of the boycotters against persons handling the Bulletin.

The negro newsboy was placed in the patrol wagon, which was followed by a howling mob of newsboys and sympathizers to the hall of justice.

Before the streets were cleared nine arrests were made.

Three Lives Lost in Fire

LICKING, Mo., June 29—Three persons perished in the burning of the Collier Hotel, a frame building, here today.

the opening solo, her sweet voice being easily heard far out in the crowd. She was loudly applauded.

THE QUEEN'S ACCEPTANCE

Queen Isabelle, her cheeks flushed with joy, happiness beaming in every feature and a picture of beauty not often seen; then gracefully stepped forward and addressing the mayor, said:

"Honored subjects and true: With pleasure I receive this key, by you loyally tendered. Assurance do I give that the royal mandate shall go forth for all to join in revelry and song and the wooing of that elusive sprite called happiness. And further do I cause it to be known that should this key fall to be used for the righteous purpose for which it is so nobly designed I shall fit another key to the Dungeon of Despair, which shall open for those who weep, and they shall be cast into its depths that they may weep alone. And since the seal of my approval shall be placed upon naught that savors of sorrow, therefore, be ye charged to conduct yourselves joyfully and merrily and obey to the letter the royal proclamation."

QUEEN'S PROCLAMATION

Prime Minister Robinson then read Isabelle's proclamation as follows:

"Whereas, today my loyal subjects

HONORED Subjects and True: With pleasure I receive this key, by you loyally tendered. Assurance do I give that the royal mandate shall go forth for all to join in revelry and song and the wooing of that elusive sprite called happiness. And further do I cause it to be known that should this key fall to be used for the righteous purpose for which it is so nobly designed, I shall fit another key to the Dungeon of Despair, which shall open for those who weep, and they shall be cast into its depths that they may weep alone.—Queen Isabelle.

"Bear me ever in your hearts and minds, as I shall you.

"It is my command that for these five happy days you banish care from out your midst.

"Bid sorrow seek another clime.

"Open wide the gates of hospitality. Give rein to mirth and joy and festal merriment. Let good will and cheer and brightness be our chief concern and naught but joy prevail.

CHEAP SOCIALIST ARGUMENT

SOME of the socialist papers seem to use very little good sense in advocating some of the reforms that a great many of the modern reformers are interested in. They are so indoctrinated that they endeavor to fit conditions to their theory, regardless of whether it can be made to fit or not. For instance, one of their papers says: "Australia has opened a public brick yard and reduced the price of brick to $2.20 per thousand, while the brick combine's price is $10."

A socialist asks that we now note closely, and he thinks he can show us the difference between capitalist public ownership and the kind proposed by the socialists. In this case the price of brick was reduced to the small capitalist, and he saved nearly $8 per thousand. The man who made the brick—the workingman—got a very little increase in wages, if he got anything at all. Socialist public ownership would have given the man who makes brick $10 per thousand for the making, less the actual cost of mud and other incidentals. In this case the $8 would have gone to the brickmaker instead of the small capitalist. Now, says our socialist friend, can you see the point.

We rather think we can see the point, but not exactly as the writer intended. The idea seems to be that in such a manufactory all the profits should be divided up with the few operatives, instead of giving the public, as owner, most of them. Suppose such a thing should be tried in the steel trust, coal mines and most other such great corporations. It would soon build up a rich class of workers—if they continue to work—not so much less opulent and arbitrary than the owners are now. It really appears as though such a paragraph could only have been written by some socialist grafter and demagogue to mislead the ignorant and gather him in by allurements of wonderful returns for his labor. As a usual thing the socialist is an intelligent and thinking man, but not all of them, and in some places there is a tendency to resort to the cheap arguments and allurements like the above, which do a thousand fold more harm than good. If public ownership comes in the way of any of these great industries it will be worked out in its details, not by the agitators in the papers, but by men of common sense and executive ability, in such ways and methods as to be most nearly just to the greatest number. The agitators, by their voices and pens, are doing good and useful work—such of them as are intelligent and honest.—Ulah State Journal.

TOO MUCH GOLD

W. L. HAVERMAN of Cincinnati, a well known statistician and authority on the production of precious metals says there will be a greater production of gold in the United States this year than ever before in the history of the country, and that Nevada gives promise of outstripping all other states in the production of the yellow metal. Generally speaking, he says there is an increase in the amount mined in every mining district where gold is found.

"This outlook," continued Mr. Haverman, "has caused a great deal of comment in certain financial circles as to the effect the increase would have upon the value of gold and whether the standard will be lowered. Quite a number of experts predict that this year the production of gold will be in excess of a hundred million dollars, and that in 1906 it may run up to as high as $150,000,000. In 1902 the production of gold in the United States was $30,000,000, while in 1903 the output was about $74,000,000. The figures for 1904 are not yet available, but they will show a large increase, possibly greater than in 1902, which was a very prosperous year in mineral districts.

"A great many people may believe that the great increase in the production of gold may result in its depreciation. It is true that any large increase in the production of the yellow metal will effect the value of gold to the extent of raising the prices of commodities, and thereby necessitating the use of more money to purchase things which now come at lower prices."

GROVER GETS A JOB

IN placing Grover Cleveland on the Executive Committee of the Equitable Life Insurance Company, Thos. E. Ryan has done an act of charity. Ten years ago Arthur McEwen was far-sighted enough to predict that Grover Cleveland would be a standing candidate for President of the United States for the rest of his life. Grover has amply verified Mr. McEwen's prediction thus far, but with rather indifferent luck. Lately he had begun to grow desperate. Repeated shyes at the Presidency having failed, it got to be with Grover a case of "any old thing will do." Indeed, he was not reluctant to let this be known, for in a recent address to the New York Bar Association he spoke of being an ex-President as "the most forlorn and God-forsaken of all conditions."

As on of the Executive Committee of the Equitable,

Grover is not likely to cut much of a figure. Thomas E. Ryan is a masterful man, whose object in getting control of that unfortunate insurance company is to exploit its funds in financing the gigantic schemes of himself and August Belmont in building city railroads, and other money-making projects of heavy dimensions. He and Morton will boss the job; the executive committee will execute nothing more than a very small figure.

Perhaps Grover does not know this. Perhaps he means to cut quite a swath. He is naturally fond of the lime-light, he is not used to playing second fiddle, and anyone who has made any study of his past career knows full well that the sacrifice of a friend is but a small item to Grover Cleveland if the sacrifice can accomplish anything for the advancement of the ex-President.

But we are inclined to believe that Mr. Ryan who cuts something of a figure among the solid men of New York, is aware of all this, and knew what he was doing, when he selected Mr. Cleveland for the position on the committee. The former chief executive is getting quite old; he never had much mental activity, and his physical energy is wobbling under a load of fat that would rupture the kidneys of a government mule. It is likely, and more than likely, that he whom the inspired Dana named "the stuffed phopet" will be more of a stuffed prophet than ever in the affairs of the Equitable.

THE Russian newspapers are said to be expressing themselves as well pleased with the Czar's speech to the Zemstvos' delegates. It would be a rash and vainglorious Russian editor who would express himself otherwise, if he hoped to retain his job.

IT is understood that the President will spend the summer on his forthcoming work, "Distinguished Criminals I Have Endorsed," respectfully dedicated to Paul Morton.

Reno Is the Mecca for All Pleasure Seeking Travelers These Carnival Days

Every train into the city yesterday was loaded with carnival visitors, and while it would be a difficult matter to estimate the number of people who came in to attend the crowning of the carnival queen, as the initial exercise of the big celebration, it is certain that the crowd numbers the largest on record.

All of the hotels were crowded yesterday, but accommodations were found for all who came in. The street car line between Reno and Sparks was run all night and the night service will continue until after the big celebration.

Accommodations for about 1000 have been secured at Sparks by the carnival committee and every available room in the city is being secured by the committee.

At the hotels a large number of cots were put in and the citizens of the town generally have opened their homes to the many visitors within the gates of the city.

While there is a great crowd of visitors in town from outside points, the committee expects the largest crowd Sunday and Monday.

Reno will certainly entertain a record breaking crowd. Advice from every town in the state tell of delegations of people who are coming up to spend the Fourth. Consequently the greatest crowd may be expected Sunday and Monday.

PROGRAM FOR THE AMUSEMENTS TODAY

WORK OF DECORATING IS NOW COMPLETED

H. Fraley and M. F. Goodwin & Co. yesterday completed the decoration of their stores on Virginia street. Queen Isabelle's picture is the center of attraction. It is an excellent likeness of the young lady.

The other decorations in the window give the place an artistic appearance. The outside is gaily festooned with carnival bunting and at the entrance a large blue bell is hung. Over the entrance, also in carnival colors, are the words, "Carnival Queen." This is one of the best decorated places in town.

The three banks are also handsomely decorated.

Sol Levy's store was also added to the list yesterday and adds much to the appearance of Virginia street.

Host Gosse of the Riverside Hotel has also displayed his public spiritedness, his hotel being among the best decorated places in Reno.

PATRIOTISM AT THE PARK NEXT SUNDAY

Next Sunday evening the exercises at Riverside park will be of a patriotic character. The choir which will consist of from twenty to twenty-five voices, will sing the national anthems. Besides the singers Mrs. Rousseau will play the organ, Mr. Walter Hastings will play the lead with the cornet and Charles Loring will play an alto cornet. Mr. Driver's address will be on the "National Spirit and Issues." The public is very cordially invited to attend these exercises.

Scarcity of Water-Mains Results in $6,000 Fire on Riverside Heights

Riverside Heights is badly in need of better water service for fire protection. This fact was brought home in a costly manner yesterday afternoon when two handsome homes representing in the neighborhood of $7000 were entirely destroyed, while the firemen stood by powerless to render effective aid.

The fire started in the home of C. J. Anderson on California avenue. A light breeze soon fanned the flames to the home of Andrew Leitch. Within an hour both homes were a mass of smoldering embers.

It was necessary to send in an alarm from the Riverside Hotel. Chief Webster had the department on the scene within five minutes, remarkably quick considering the long distance. The chemical engine had a stream on the blaze first, but the supply was soon exhausted.

A long stretch of hose was required to convey the water to the fire. These two factors greatly handicapped the department. Even the Anderson barn, containing harness, a new buggy and a large amount of hay was entirely destroyed. A portion of the furniture from both homes was saved.

Mr. Anderson is probably the heaviest loser, for in addition to the destruction of his home, a fine nursery, representing the expenditure of a large sum of money and careful hard work, was also ruined. His loss will probably amount to about $5000, with $1200 insurance. The loss on the Leitch residence amounted to about $1600, including the household effects of the Nicholson family, who occupied the residence.

The fire it is thought was caused by a defective flue. When discovered it had gained considerable headway.

As a result of the fire it is understood the city will at once take steps to provide more fire plugs in the southwestern portion of the city.

Badly Injured Leg

Lou Radcliffe, the jeweler, while riding his bicycle a few days ago ran afoul of a railroad track, badly cutting and bruising his right leg. He paid little attention to the injury until the leg began swelling. The leg is now in a bad condition. It is being attended to by Dr. Franck.

Dance This Evening

The carnival committee has arranged to give a dance at the Wheelmen hall this evening and tomorrow night. The admission will be 50 cents for gentlemen. Ladies will be admitted free. The music will be furnished by the Wheelmen's Band and a good time is assured.

The Crescent Times
Volume 1, No. 1, of the Times has been issued. The new paper starts out with two pages containing eight columns of bright spicy news. It is published in the new mining town of Crescent, located in Lincoln county. Brown & Reber are the publishers.

If you ask anyone where the throne of Great Britain is to be found he would at once reply without hesitation "Westminster Abbey." In one respect he would be right, for the throne on which British sovereigns are now crowned is to be found there, but, nevertheless, the ancient chair which we generally accept as the British throne is not really entitled to the honor.

The original British throne is to be seen in the market place of Kingston-on-Thames, and is the earliest throne England possessed for the coronation of its monarchs. It was used by all the early monarchs. It was used by all the early English kings, though it consists of nothing more than a plain slab of stone, chipped down and worn with age and exposure to an untold number of tempests. It stands upon the site of the Saxon kings' Surrey palace, and the seven pillars commemorate the seven kings who were crowned there. In all probability this ancient stone would not have been recognized as the British throne today, had it not been for a single incident. When Edward I, conquered the Scots, in 1297, he brought back to England the coronation stone whereon all the kings of Scotland had been crowned, and which is known as the stone of Scone. There is a shroud of legend and romance about this stone. It was believed to have been the pillow of Jacob when he dreamed his vision of the ladder to heaven at Bethel, but geologists have since proved that the stone is nothing more romantic than a slab of sandstone, quarried in the west of Scotland at some age beyond the reach of history, and for some reason or other used for coronation purposes.

Edward I, was of course, proud of his capture, and it is said that he was recrowned on the stone by his army after which he brought the stone to London and had a chair of oak—originally intended, to be bronze—built on it, and which he ordained should be known as the only British throne, upon which his successors should be crowned. This is exactly what has happened, for, beginning with Edward II, all England's sovereigns have been crowned in this chair, with the single exception of Mary Tudor. When Cromwell was crowned protector the throne was taken from the Abbey to Westminster Hall, where the ceremony took place.

Age, however, has made the chair so decrepit that before the jubilee of Victoria it had to be repaired to make it stable. At present it stands in the Chapel of Edward the Confessor, at Westminster, and is covered with gold brocade on the occasions of the coronation, in order to hide the handiwork of vandals who have so disgracefully cut their initials and names in the time-honored wood.

But as time progressed there sprang up a need for other thrones which the monarch could see on the occasion of great state ceremonies. The most beautiful and the newest of all the British thrones is to be found in the House of Lords, and which is used when the king opens parliament. It is a magnificent piece of work, which cost thousands of dollars to erect, and dates from 1840. The wood is richly carved and gilded, and above it is a fine canopy, which is said to have taken two years to complete. The upholstery is of the most luxurious description, and in a bright light the throne glitters with the prisms cast by a multitude of brilliants secreted among the woodwork.

This throne is often said to be the throne of Britain, but this, of course, depends on how the term is accepted. Ascending the throne usually means the throne on which the sovereign is crowned, in which case, of course, that at Westminster is entitled to principal honors, the House of Lords' throne being that from which the king makes announcements referring to the government of the country.

The throne at Windsor Castle, however, is infinitely more beautiful, and is undoubtedly the most valuable of all the British thrones. It is carved completely of ivory, and before it is an exquisitely carved ivory stool. This throne is studded with a multitude of precious stones, diamonds, emeralds and rubies, set in gold, and was presented to England by one of the Princes of India.

Finally, the throne at Buckingham Palace must be counted among the seats of the mighty. It stands in the throne-room, which is an imposing chamber 66 feet long, but the chair itself is of comparatively simple design. It is used by the monarch at all state ceremonies at the palace.

As a mere lot she was permitted to do this, and as she grew older the untidy custom was never abandoned, for the simple reason that she herself did not notice anything unusual about it, and probably nobody else, took the trouble to correct her. Another slovenly habit is leaving a bunch of combings in her comb or on her dressing table. Constant vigilance on a woman's part is necessary in these small traits unless she would be judged unworthy her birthright—daintiness.

The Servant Respects this Mistress

A woman should insist upon being mistress of her own kitchen, but, unless she possesses self-control, patience and tact, she is really just as unfit to manage her servants as a child. It is a very true saying that a man or woman who has not learned to control self is not fit to control others. If a woman cannot go into her kitchen without losing her patience or losing her temper, she would do better to stay out of it. Fault must be found but with servants, as with children, it should be in a quiet, dignified way, and a proper time should be chosen for it. A woman who does not know any better than to take a time when a girl is particularly worried or has some special piece of work she is trying to get through, such as washing, ironing or getting dinner, will never be likely to have good service. If she scolds or nags she, at once lowers herself to the level of her servant, and loses the respect which every mistress of a house should strive to deserve from those about her.

The Charm of Neatness

Neatness is one of the most attractive of feminine qualities to a man. It is also one of the rarest. Early and persistent must be the training which carries the girl into womanhood with her "bump of neatness" well developed. Unless inherently fastidious during school days, she is liable to drift into careless habits which she never outgrows.

One girl may have a trick of leaving shoes about her room. As a mere lot she was permitted to do this, and as she grew older the untidy custom was never abandoned, for the simple reason that she herself did not notice anything unusual about it, and probably nobody else, took the trouble to correct her. Another slovenly habit is leaving a bunch of combings in her comb or on her dressing table. Constant vigilance on a woman's part is necessary in these small traits unless she would be judged unworthy her birthright—daintiness.

Gran other m th—w the Mayflower set sail for Boston harbor on September 6, 1620. Here William of Orange landed and was first proclaimed King. Here the English fleet started to encounter the invincible Armada, and Spain was done to a turn. Here was witnessed the departure of Sir Francis Drake's expeditions of discovery and piracy. This is Devonshire, where browse the red droves of comely cattle. Drake seems to have been a merry rover, for here where he lived he was nicknamed "the fellow-traveler of the sun," when he started out from the mouth of the Plym.

I feel a good deal as Sir Francis felt barring the piracy I love to travel, and it is wholly harmonious with my mood that I have been commissioned by you to make a comprehensive tour of Europe, and report to you how cheaply and comfortably it can be done. I say comfortably without hesitation, for the mammoth proportions of our latest steamers enable them to sit upon the waves without rocking or pitching, and the passenger need not be seasick unless he declines the services of a bromide prophylactic, which any prudent physician can prescribe.

cheaply; for a part of the service these cheaply; for a part of the service these letters will render will be to show the methods whereby the tour of Europe can be made with little more expense than staying at home.

I need not say that there are dead loads of fun on the passage over, for in a week close and valuable acquaintances are made and a good many of the passengers act like boys just let out of school. I went on deck this morning and found that the betting mania which had manifested itself strongly for four days had grown into a frenzy of finance. A score of passengers were seated in a circle on deck hotly and vociferously discussing the contingencies of landing. In the luxurious smoking-room were other groups gathered about tables in clouds of smoke watching piles of gold and silver and something they called "chips" in the center of each table, uttering strange mystic cries, solemnly dealing more cards and occasionally raking in the little piles of exposed specie. Their faces were white and unsullied by the sun. But the group on deck wore upon their noses the hectic flush of solar blanchment, and each one was shedding skin enough to make a pocket-book. When a steamer lands it is not difficult to guess the different diversions of the passengers, because each ardent poker player bears aloft a blanched and undercolored brow.

But there are other ways. Here sit the ruby revelers on deck—staid folk from New York, Boston, Vicksburg and Oshkosh—railroad men, merchants, doctors, ministers, drummers, professors, fighting time with a new diversion. Most of them have English money in their pockets.

"I'll bet a guinea," says a stout and jolly doctor from Cincinnati, "that the number of the pilot boat at Plymouth is an even number."

The challenge is instantly snapped up by a little man in spectacles walking nervously up and down the deck, and they exchange cards. The little man adds "A pound to a shilling that the pilot doesn't wear a silk hat." This is discussed by nearly all in the group and finally, it being thought that the odds are not great enough, the bet is made two pounds to a shilling.

"What'll you bet he doesn't wear a swallow-tail coat and white necktie?" put in a man in a red fez. But this is thought too preposterous and is not insisted upon.

papin hat, that he will carry an umbrella, that he will step on the ladder with his left foot first.

"I'll bet two dollars even," says a practical manager who has been making obsequious to Neptune most of the way and who has not learned the new language of finance "that the pilot won't wear any socks or undershirt." Even this queer bet finds a taker.

"Let's bet on the number of his boots," says a wealthy manufacturer languidly.

"I'll bet a guinea he has two," says the president of a railroad company.

"I'll bet," exclaims a fresh young fellow (at the time of meeting the vessel), that he will wear a tar-collector "that you'll find out the size and weight of his boots when you try to verify some of your other bets."

"Let's bet on his name," suggests a reckless young fellow with a nose like a full-blown rose.

"I'll bet," said a lady in a yellow rug, turning softly in her steamer chair and wearily lifting her head from her pillow, "that this pilot's name is Pontius."

And so they went on hour by hour, while the low-lying lilac band in the distance broadened and deepened in contour and color, and the vessels we had passed faded away to the west and hearing of the death of George Washington. A little ways in the country is Stonehenge, that marvelous collection of great rocks on end where the Druids held their mystical worship and auto do te. At Exeter, Bath and Wells, Salisbury and Glastonbury Cathedrals and London your scribe will gather curious materials for his next letter.

Meantime let us discuss the ways and means of travel. In the first place, don't come to Europe for the mere sake of doing something that is considered fashionable. Don't come at all unless you know enough to need the experience. And you do not know enough if you are ignorant of geography and his-

American tourist in Switzerland, "and I wish to the land sakes I was home." He yawned and turned to his wife, sitting on the other end of the bench in the park and added, "Haven't we been in this town about long enough, Mary? Why don't we go to Lucerne?"

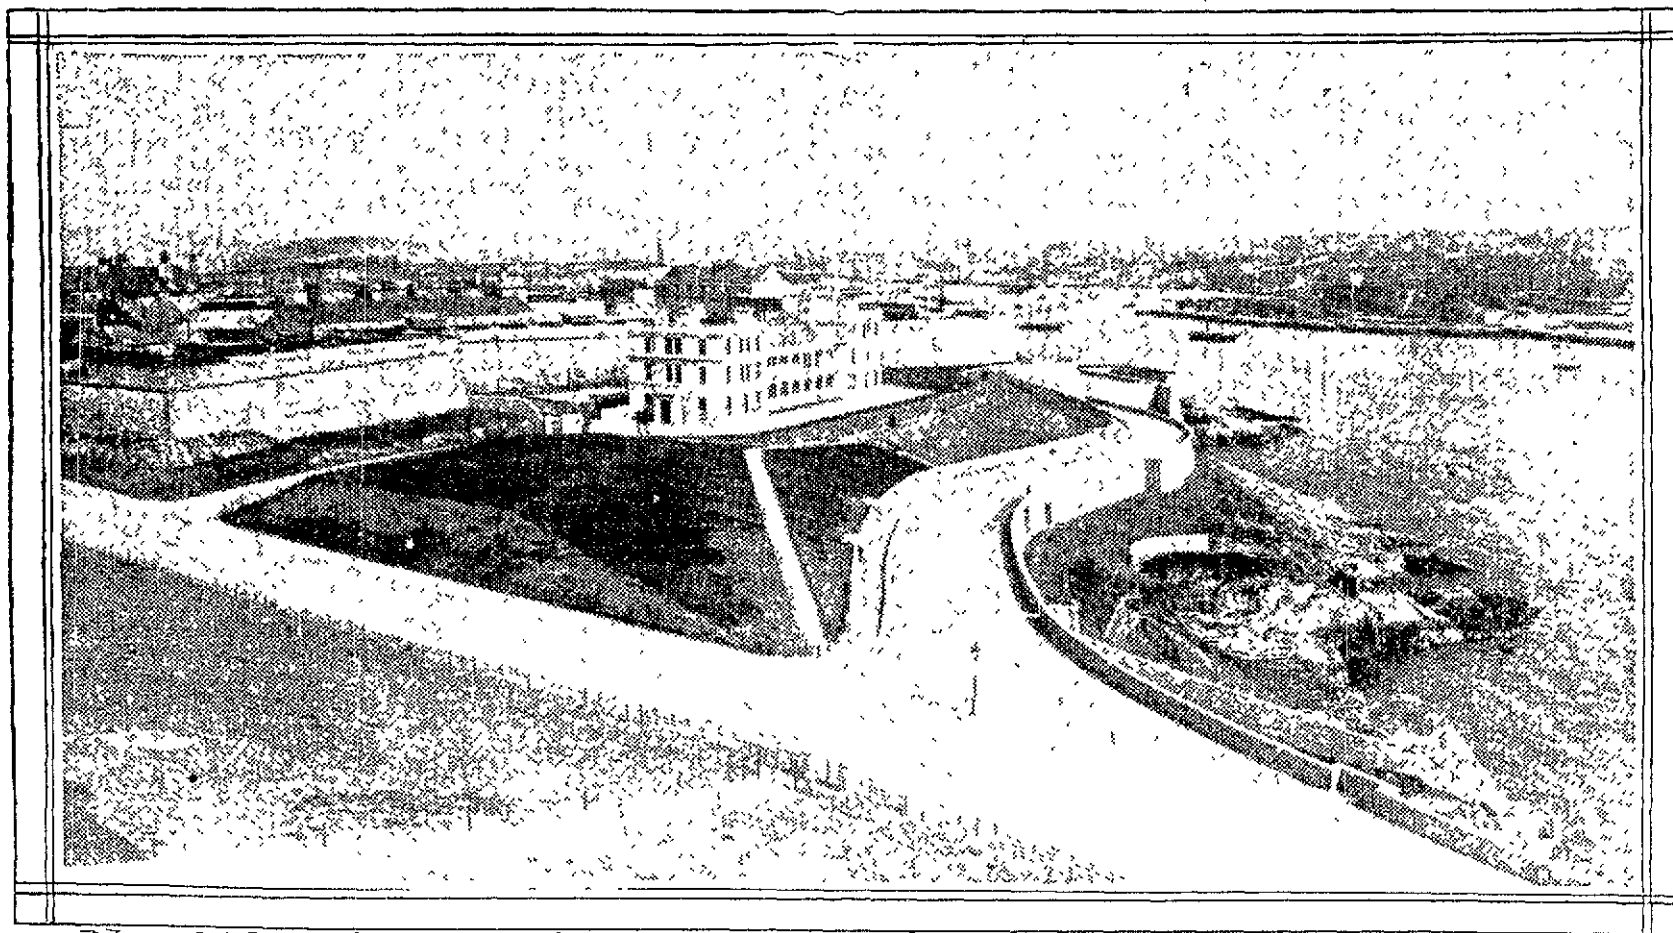

"Henry!" exclaimed the good wife of the wealthy wanderer—"Henry, this is Lucerne!"

A good many such men come to Europe not because they wish to come, or because they need to come, but because they are badgered by their wives and daughters into following the fashion and keeping in the swim. They are not likely to learn much, and they bring home with them the opinion which they carried away—that traveling is a tedious business, and especially that the United States surpasses all other nations in every respect, and that we have the best of everything, the biggest of everything, and that we can never learn anything from anybody. Of course, this is lamentable and preposterous.

Americans who come to Europe generally spend twice as much money as they need to, because they do not know how to travel. Our countrymen, as a rule, are extravagant, self-indulgent and wasteful. To show the readers of your paper how to see Europe thoroughly and cheaply will be one of the chief objects of these letters, for the writer has had unusually opportunities for presenting the subject in its various phases and from every point of view. We shall see what the mountains and rivers look like, what the cities and towns look like, shall visit modern palaces and tumble-down castles, but most of our time will be spent studying the people themselves and finding out how they live and what they talk about, and what are their hopes and fears, their needs and aspirations.

Perhaps the ideal way to see Europe is to travel with Vanderbilt behind you an automobile under you and eternity before you. But some of us do not possess those advantages and are compelled to husband our resources, both of money and time. For all such I write.

On shipboard are various methods of entertainment. Out on deck the favorite is skittles, in marine language "shuffle-board," consisting of prodding a soft pine pancake with the end of a soft pine pudding-stick and making it knock other pancakes out of place. You wouldn't suppose such pugnacious play could stimulate the tender sentiment, but it does and the steward assures me that not only trip-long flirtations, but life-long marriages have resulted from throwing beanbags. Of course there is music in the music-room and cards, cribbage and dominoes in the drawing-room.

Naval Hospital and Barracks from the Harbor

The mania is contagious. The bets that have been made every day since we started, concerning the daily run do not seem to have been nearly exciting enough and something more exhilarating is demanded. Bets are now made in rapid succession from a shilling to a pound that the pilot is married, that he will have his pantaloons tucked into the tops of his boots, that he will have red hair, that he will be possessed of the big gulls, harbingers of land, came out and greeted the great ship, flitting before it like heralds and dashing joyfully after it in a silver train.

So presently we come to Plymouth where Archbishop Land fixed his eyes upon the prayerful insubordinates and exclaimed to them, like an earlier Greeley, "Go West, young man, go West!" And presently we shall be tossed ashore in a little steamboat, and as the plump dames climb timidly down the ladder they will doubtless "ing out to the men who have already descended "Remember Lot's wife!" This whole Devonshire district has made an important mark in the world's history, aside from the Pilgrim's and the Dutch William who in 1688 "with Mary came on." Right here at Torbay the whole British Navy dressed in mourning and set its flags at half-mast in 1799 on lory. Thousands come to Europe every year who ought never to leave their native shores. To travel without intelligent interests or definite purpose—nothing can be drearier or more idiotic. An Athenian said to Socrates, "Phodrus has been abroad, but they say he has returned none the wiser."

"Of course!" exclaimed the philosopher, "for he took himself along."

"I'm tired to death of this," said

Laid Cornerstone for the Schoolhouse

MASONS DIRECT THE CEREMONIES

Exercises Witnessed by Nearly Every Resident of Sparks, in Addition to Many Visitors

The cornerstone of the new school building was laid yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the Free and Accepted Masons. A large crowd of Reno and Sparks people were present and the exercises were marked with success in every respect.

The parade was formed at the end of the electric car line, and headed by the Boys' Band of Reno, marched to the site of the building on Monroe street. Grand Marshal C. A. Beemer opened the ceremonies with a few well chosen introductory remarks after which the following articles were deposited in the archives of the cornerstone:

A copy of the Nevada State Journal, a copy of the Reno Evening Gazette, a copy of the book, "Greater Nevada," a program of the ceremonies of the day, a photograph of the new Baptist church in Sparks, a photograph of Sparks in 1905, a photograph of the round house, a photograph of the machine shops and the first and last issue of the Sparks Dispatch.

When these articles had been deposited the Grand Master was presented by the Grand Architect with the plumb level and square, the implements with which to lay the cornerstone.

The cornerstone, a finely polished block of granite, was then lowered to its final resting place and tested by the grand officer, after which it was cemented by Grand Master Beemer.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies the oration of the day was delivered by Professor Robert Levers. It was a very masterful address explaining the ceremonies of the day.

Too much praise cannot be given to the Boys' Band for their services. The boys certainly rendered a good account of themselves and on all sides words of praise were heard in appreciation of their work.

The following is the program of the exercises:

Grand Marshall's introduction of Grand Master C. A. Beemer.

Remarks by Chairman of the Board of School Trustees, G. W. Ingalls.

Remarks by Grand Master, C. A. Beemer.

The body of George Frank, aged 35, a former employe of the Floristan paper mills, who was killed by being run over by a Southern Pacific passenger train was brought to Reno yesterday. F. J. Frank, a brother of the dead man, who is a miner at Washoe City, attended the inquest held at Verdi yesterday, when the corner's jury returned a verdict of death from accidental causes.

Mr. Frank stated that the body would probably be shipped to Fremont, Ohio, his former home. Until a message is received from the unfortunate man's sister no disposition will be made of the body. If the body is not shipped east for interment the funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon.

ARRESTED BECAUSE HE BUILT A FIRE

At the instance of Fire Chief W. W. Webster, A. C. Webb, a railroad man, was arrested yesterday upon a charge of maintaining a nuisance. Webb built a fire upon a lot upon which he is building a house on Maple street, to get out of the way a quantity of rubbish. The fire made quite a blaze and some one pulled the fire alarm and brought the department to the scene.

Chief Webster went to the office of City Attorney Stoddard and drew up a complaint which led to Mr. Webb's arrest. The prosecution is started to make an example of the defendant, that other people may be given fair warning in the matter of building fires that will jeopardize the adjacent property.

Mr. Webb was released on his own recognizance and will have a trial next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

GU T. JOLLY KNIGHTS

Get Ready For The Fourth...

LOYALLY CHEERED BY HER LOVING SUBJECTS

Mirth and Happiness Mark First Night's Reign of Sovereign
Who Rules Five Days

"So shall your queen find favor from high heaven and the blessings of peace, prosperity and happiness rest upon the homes and hearts of all."

"Tis so your queen decrees.
"I, Queen Isabelle, have hereunto set my hand and caused the royal seal of the realm to be affixed at Reno, my capital, this 29th day of June, A. D. 1906, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and thirtieth.

Signed: "ISABELLE I.
"By her Prime Minister, J. L. Robinson."

EDICT OF KNIGHTHOOD

The ceremonies of crowning the Knights followed the reading of the following edict by Prime Minister Robinson:

"In ye royal realm of Reno moved there many subjects on valor bent and with carnival spirit imbued.
"In our midst these worthy wights have cast about for fitting feats to bring a reign of revelry to ye huge and harmonious climax.

"Happily has their enthusiasm spread till ye germ of festivity found anchorage in the hearts and minds of ye artists, ye merchants, ye politician, ye innkeeper, ye daily bread winner, ye man with the hoe, ye every subject in whatsoever walk of life he be.

"And ye germs of festivity did feed upon cares and troubles and woes, till naught is left but ye rollicking love of fun, ye light heart and ye good cheer.

"O noble squires even so desireth ye queen of the carnival and a thousand couriers, hath her royal highness had posted in ye nooks and ye corners of these domains, and ye thousand couriers, unite in a clamor of praise for the deeds of ye loyal subjects.

"A thousand men would ye queen invest with the favor of knighthood, as a token of her royal appreciation of deeds all valorously done. But hold. 'Tis not the time when knighthood was in flower—so eight good men and true are from out our countless numbers chosen, liege representatives to be of such as serve our sovereign faithfully and well.

"Lik't to their names:"

"Mayor Daniel Wier O'Connor, Mr. George Robert Perkins, Mr. Charles James Sadler, Mr. John Harold Hamlin, Mr. Robert William Parry, Mr. Graham Sanford, Mr. Ernest Lafayette Lingham."

As their names were called the favored ones came forward to the foot of the throne and while kneeling the stately queen with knighthood sword conferred the titles as follows:

G. W. Perkins, Sir George of Gottle's Acre.

C. J. Sadler, Earl of Overland

N. E. Wilson, Sir Duke D'Alamo.

E. L. Bingham, Duke of Public O. Pinion.

D. W. O'Connor, Lord High Keeper of Commonweal.

Robert Parry, Lord Robert William, Prince of Pyramid.

Graham Sanford, Lord of Timestepone and Scissordom.

SOL LEVY'S ARABIC SPEECH

Sol Levy, on behalf of the Knights of Khorassan, then bade the queen welcome, speaking, as he thought, in the Arabic tongue. The prime minister had been thoughtful enough to provide a stenographer, from which the following report is secured:

Afawuhudf (cheers) tarftfd Unoa hlyootqx (more cheers) Agradloya butf odawktffgy Ahdffmm (loud cheers.) Agroypts wlyqff anup thmbz arfgf Aodwkf hlyqff nupj ehfkqf (cheers.)

Translated, Mr. Levy's speech was as follows:

"Most lovely queen, I take this method on behalf of the Knights of Khorassan of welcoming you. May your reign be one of happiness and mirth. Rule with a firm hand, but ever on the side of your loyal subjects. In our native tongue we greet you. Certainly our language is not understood by you. But, my fellow Khorassans before you do and they join me in again wishing you a glorious reign."

TO THE CORONATION BALL

"Hail, Hail, the Queen Has Come" was then rendered by the Wheelmen's Band. This was followed by several selections and the journey to the hall was started. There the queen received her subjects for some minutes and by 10 o'clock the ball was on. Until after midnight the merriment continued.

THE PARADE

of last evening's coronation parade held under the auspices of the Knights of Khorassan. It was one of the most essential features of the crowning of her gracious majesty, Queen Isabelle, and was conducted in a manner that reflects great credit upon the worthy Knights, who had it in charge.

About 200 Knights took part in the parade, and besides these there were many clowns and freaks which swelled the number to about 600. The Knights in their spectacular garments, made a sight the like of which has never been before in this city. They were headed by Grand Marshal Fred L. White, seated on a stately steed. He was followed by his aides, also on horseback. Immediately behind these was the float containing the nobles of the Knights of Khorassan. The other Knights brought up the rear of the procession, each one carrying a burning flambeau.

Queen Isabelle was seated in a magnificent white coach drawn by four noble white steeds. Seated in the midst of this galaxy of white, her gracious majesty was certainly a glorious spectacle and from all sides as she passed her arrival was heralded by the loud and enthusiastic cheering of her loyal subjects.

Immediately following the queen was a float containing her train, accompanied by the pages, dressed in white and on horseback.

Chief among the attractions of the parade were the clowns and freaks. They were entirely original and elicited the hearty laughter of the throngs by their queer antics and funny faces.

At an early hour of the evening the crowd began to assemble on the streets to be traversed by the royal family, and long before the approach of the parade was heralded the streets were almost impassable. It is estimated that in the neighborhood of 13,000 subjects witnessed the passing of the sovereign and her royal escorts.

The parade was formed at the Parry residence on Sierra street, and proceeded from there down Sierra street to its junction with Second. There the calcade turned and wended its way down Second street to Center.

REX ISSUES A PROCLAMATION

Jolly Old King Confesses That He Is
"Sore" at the Reigning
Queen

King Rex, the jolly old soul, who lost his powed with the crowning of Queen Isabelle last evening, is "sore." He is intent upon revenge. In strong words the sovereign who would again be in the good graces of his wavering subjects has issued his first proclamation. It follows:

PROCLAMATION NO. 1.

DE VILLA CHAMPAGNE (Reno), sixth month, twenty-ninth day—To All Subjects Within the Confines of the City of Reno, Greeting:

I, your own King Rex, do proclaim as follows:

This night I witnessed the crowning of the gracious Queen Isabelle, and 'twas with glee galore I beheld the bending knee and the loyalty displayed by the ones over whose destiny she now holds sway.

But listen, 'Tis me, King Rex, who speaks. I am sore. Immediately after the coronation ceremonies I sent my courier to the palace of the lady of royal blood to express my wish that she change her queenly title from Isabelle to Queen Rex.

Shades of my royal ancestors! My courier brought back a scented note, tied with a pink ribbon, bearing the inscription:

"Hew-Haw!"

'Tis revenge for me! Now listen with both thy ears while I proclaim as thus:

At the setting of the sun on the fourth day of the seventh month it has been ordained that I, King Rex, shall be restored to my own. At that hour all those who fail to obey my command had better take advantage of the time intervening to make good their escape, for there will be no place, e'en amidst the tall and uncut of the Sierras, that he who would disobey me shall hide.

On the evening of our glorious Independence Day, I, Rexie, will come as an emancipator. I shall take the keys of the city (by force, if necessary), and harken, for 'tis me who speaks:

I shall cause to be stopped all timepieces within my jurisdiction, that my subjects may be caused no worry on that score. I will compel all refreshment dispensers to erect fountains without their places of business. I will also cause any alternation to be made which will in any way tend to "jolly up" my loyal subjects.

Tomorrow I shall knight and publish a list of favored ones who must carry out the duties I assign to them, and if they fail me—but perish the thought. I have spoken.

emerging on Virginia street, making its way in pomp and splendor to the throne, which had been prepared for her royal highness.

The music was also a particular feature of the parade. Two bands were in attendance and rendered strains of martial music to which the pedestrains marched in perfect time. The Wheelmen's Band and the Boys' Band, on whom the credit of this part of the program falls, are certainly deserving of great praise for the manner in which the selections were rendered.

The Boys' Band is deserving of special mention for the fact that they have been playing but a short time. Dressed in their new uniforms of spotless white they presented a neat and attractive appearance.

CORONATION BALL

The royal party, after the exercises incident to the crowning of her highness, Queen Isabelle I, proceeded to the Wheelmen's Hall, where the coronation ball was given in her honor by her many loving and loyal subjects.

It was to the martial airs of the silver cornet band that the imperial party entered the hall, the queen, leaning upon the arm of the prime minister, and attended by her ladies and courtiers.

The royal party paused at the threshold of the hall. It was for but a minute and the hum of many merry voices was hushed as the royal party appeared. The great crowd moved back to make way for the ruling queen and as she passed down the hall in all her regal splendor the dancers joined in the grand march, presenting indeed an imposing spectacle.

When the royal procession had completed its circuit of the hall Queen Isabelle, surrounded by the ladies of her court and knights held a reception. For all she had a gracious smile and many were the pledges of fealty and love expressed by her loving subjects.

"On with the dance," was her command. "Let joy be unconfined."

The soft strains of the music wafted over the heads of the dancers. The queen smiled her approval upon the happy throng. Her knights bowed low, the pages lifted her train and the imperial party retired to the ante-rooms, where eight Knights of Khorassan were waiting and formed an escort for the imperial carriage and its royal occupant.

From the hall the queen was driven to the Eagles hall, where the Knights night of her reign to a merry close in Eagle Hall last night. Her royal majesty was the guest of the Knights of Khorassan. Four hundred or more Knights, their wives, daughters and sweethearts gathered at the banquet hall at the conclusion of the coronation ball and until early this morning feasting, fun and music were the order.

It was a fitting climax and one that will long be remembered by those who were fortunate enough to witness it.

Five long tables had been spread and there was not a single vacant seat Merrill's orchestra furnished the music. The menu was elaborate. Zem zem, the nectar of all true Knights of Khorassan, was plentifully supplied.

F. P. Dann acted as toastmaster. The toasts were many and all were good. Those who responded were Hon. N. W. Roff, H. Fraley, Sol Levy, Dr. J. A. Lewis, Professor N. E. Wilson, Sam Rosenthal, J. M. Gray and Chas. L. Knox.

Will Purchase a Mill

The Nevada-Inyo Mining Company expects to purchase a mill which is located near the company's mine in Inyo county, California, within the next week or ten days and treat a large amount of ore which is now on the dump. The company has a crew of six men working on the property and plans on extensive development work, in the way of fully opening the property up. Six assays secured by the company show a general average of $97. The samples were not selected, but were picked up at random in the mine.

Change of Bill

The Pringle Stock Company will present the three act farce comedy, "Wanted, a Wife," at the opera house tonight. This is one of the most laughable farces in the company's repertoire and contains 180 laughs in 180 minutes. The different members of the company will have an opportunity to introduce numerous specialties, giving their patrons a singing, dancing, musical and dramatic treat.

Costume by Mrs. Brown

The gown worn by Queen Isabelle at the coronation ceremonies was made from dresses worn by royalty and seen by Mrs. Brown. Every thread in the dress, from the sewing silk to the spangles, was purchased at the store of Gray, Reid & Wright.

TO PROTECT DUMB ANIMALS

Reno Society Files Articles of Incorporation and Will Elect Officers Today

Articles of incorporation of the Reno Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals were filed yesterday with the Secretary of State at Carson and the clerk of the court in Reno, and a meeting will be held this afternoon in the office of G. W. Shutter-Cottrell for the purpose of electing officers and further perfecting the organization.

The purpose of the association, which is incorporated under the state laws, will be to suppress all cruelty to dumb animals.

It came to the ears of officers of the organization yesterday that a couple of cowboys, who were to participate in the "rough riding" exercises at the fair grounds Saturday afternoon intended to resort to what they claim as a brutal and barbarous exhibition. The society was informed that several chickens were to be suspended by the legs in the air and that the cowboys were to ride at break neck speed past the hanging fowl and grab feathers from its plump breast.

Should anything of this kind be attempted the officers of the humane society will see that summary steps are taken to punish the offenders.

Mr. Shutter-Cottrell, discussing the matter yesterday stated that the organization of a humane society in Reno would fill a long left want.

"What is everybody's business is usually no one's business," said Mr. Shutter-Cottrell yesterday, discussing the purposes of the society, "and through the organization cases of cruelty may be taken up and prosecuted in a systematic manner."

The following are the trustees of the society and from this number the officers of the society will be selected today. Fannie Degman, Stella Webster, A. H. Bobo, H. D. Frank, L. E. Larcombe, L. S. Hagard, H. S. Spencer, C. E. Spencer and G. W. Shutter-Cottrell.

STATE EXHIBIT IS PLUNDERED

Many Valuable Mineral Specimens Disappear from Display at St. Louis

Forty specimens of ore, made a part of the Nevada state exhibit at St. Louis exposition, and valued at hundreds of dollars, are missing.

Yesterday when Secretary Dockham of the Nevada Chamber of Commerce unpacked the boxes containing the Nevada mineral exhibit he found forty of the lot of specimens sent to St. Louis missing. A thorough search was made, but none of the missing samples of the precious ore could be located.

While it would be a difficult matter to determine the exact intrinsic value of the missing specimens, it is certain that they run almost to $1000 and perhaps to a sum much in excess of that. Without exception the specimens were all fine big samples of ore taken from the greatest mines of the state. From the various mines of the Comstock group, as well as the Tonopah and southern Nevada mines were assembled the choicest specimens to be found for the inspection of the thousands of interested visitors at the great St. Louis exposition.

Secretary Dockham is at a loss to understand how the specimens became lost, as they should have been securely packed in the boxes with the balance of the Nevada exhibit. He is of the opinion that they were stolen at St. Louis and melted up for what values could be obtained from them.

Aside from the intrinsic value of the display, considerable money and time was spent in collecting it and assembling it in this city preparatory to sending it to St. Louis.

Mr. Dockham has written to St. Louis in hopes that if the missing specimens have been lost that he may be able to recover them. He is strongly inclined to the opinion however that they were stolen.

EDITED BY DICK DEAN

OF SPORTSBATTLING NELSON AND LOU
M. HOUSEMAN ARRIVE IN RENO*LITTLE DANE TO SEE
ROOT-HART FIGHT

Will Leave Today for San Francisco With His Manager, Billy Nolan, and Return Monday

Battling Nelson, the fighting Dane, who aspires to wrest from the shoulders of James Edward Britt, the light-weight championship toga, his manager Billy Nolan and Lou M. Houseman, sporting editor of the Inter-Ocean and one of the first sporting authorities of the country, arrived in Reno last night. Nelson and his manager leave this morning for San Francisco, where they will remain over Sunday, returning to Reno Monday morning in time to witness the Hart-Root fight.

Nelson and Britt have a forfeit up for a fight to take place before August 6th. Britt has been matched to fight Sullivan for twenty rounds on July 21st and under the terms of the agreement with Nelson he is to engage in nothing more than six-round bouts before he makes the fight with "Bat." Accordingly if he meets Sullivan, Nelson will claim the $2500 forfeit. That is the business which is taking the sturdy little fighter to the Golden Gate city today.

"Would I like to meet Britt in a finish fight here in Nevada?"

"Well, you bet I would. That is the kind of a fight I would like to make with Britt. If Britt fights Sullivan he will forfeit the $2500 which he has up to bind the agreement with me. I would rather fight Britt a finish fight in Reno than meet him under any other conditions."

Lou Houseman, who is looking after the interests of Jack Root stated last night that his man would be here Saturday morning and that he was in the pink of condition, ready to do the battle of his life.

Mr. Houseman has not been in Reno since the days of the great Carson battle in which Lanky Bob handed Pompadour Jim the sleeping powders in a solar plexus package. He expressed great surprise at the growth of the city, and especially of the bright appearance of the city streets, which were a blaze of light when he stepped off the train last night.

"This is truly a progressive Western city," said Mr. Houseman.

Jack Root will be in Reno Saturday morning. Root, in a letter from Eden, in Ogden canyon, to Secretary J. P. Egan of the Reno club, states that he decided to finish up his training in Utah, as he has the finest training quarters and plenty of good fast men to work with.

For this reason Root has delayed in coming to Reno. He has been training with Schreck and George and Jimmy Gardiner, before the two Lowell boys left for their home in Massachusetts after the fistic carnival in the Mormon town.

DIVISION OF THE PURSE

The fighters, as yet, have not decided upon a division of the purse money. Hart has stated that he will fight, winner take all, but it is probable that the stake money will be cut 75 per cent to the winner and 25 per cent to the loser. This clause in the articles of agreement was left blank as the principals or their managers did not meet before the articles were signed, and no understanding was reached on that score. Houseman and McCormick, managers for the two fighters, will probably get together today and agree upon this point.

FOUGHT EIGHT FAST ROUNDS

Hart yesterday fought two four-round bouts with McCormick and Thompson, after he had completed his gymnasium work. Twice near the conclusion of the last round with McCormick Hart knocked McCormick to the floor, but the big one quickly regained his feet and went after his protegee with a vim. Hart's wind is certainly great. He goes four rounds each with his trainers, skips the rope, wrestles, exercises with weights and goes through the routine of gymnasium work and does not lose his breath; even in the most strenuous of the work his respiration does not appear to increase.

ROOT IS THROUGH TRAINING

Root leaves Salt Lake this morning and will arrive here tomorrow. He will probably take a short spin over the road, but as he has been training at an altitude about the same as here he will experience no difficulty becoming acclimated. Root has been training faithfully with several of the fastest men in the fighting business, and comes to Reno fit to make the fight of his life.

HART FINISHES SUNDAY

Marvin Hart will put in a strenuous day today, followed by somewhat lighter tomorrow and on Sunday morning he will terminate his training with a short spin on the road and will rest from that time until he grasps the mittened hand of his adversary, Jack Root.

WIRE TO RINGSIDE

Arrangements were made yesterday with the Western Union Telegraph Company to run a wire from the ringside to the city to connect with the company's office here. It is probable that several wires will be run from the ring to the city to handle the large number of messages that will be sent to the principal papers of the United States.

JEFFRIES IN SAN FRANCISCO

President Livingston of the Reno Athletic Club, received a message last night from James J. Jeffries, stating that he had arrived in San Francisco from New Orleans and that he would leave for Reno Friday night, arriving here Saturday morning.

BASEBALL SERIES SAN JOSE TEAM TO ELICITS MUCH REACH HERE
INTEREST TONIGHT

One of the attractive features of the carnival program is the championship baseball series to be played between the Overlands of Reno and the Winnemucca team.

On Sunday and Monday mornings at 11 o'clock the Overlands and Winnemucca teams will line up on the diamond at the State Park and on the afternoon of the Fourth they will play the concluding game of the series.

Upon the series of games rests the ownership of the championship pennant for the year 1905.

Manager Brown of the "Brownies" of Spoonville, arrived in the city yesterday and stated that his team would reach this city on Saturday evening. The "Brownies" will play the Overland team on Tuesday afternoon.

The San Jose bicycle team will reach Reno this evening and spend the day tomorrow practicing up for the big championship race next Sunday afternoon.

Carter and McWhirter spent some time yesterday practicing on the sprint, riding some exceedingly fast quarters. All members of the team are showing up in fine shape and are prepared to make Sunday's race one of the fastest fifty mile relay races ever ridden on the track here.

On account of the return of Keddie there will be several changes on the team and a complete rearrangement of the line up.
